AMERICAN STEAMER FORCIBLY SEARCHED BY BRITISH SAILORS

CRUISER WAITING OUTSIDE MEXICAN HARBOR, PRESUMABLY TO SEIZE SHIP, WHICH HAS QUESTIONABLE RECORD

SUSPICION AROUSED BY CREW

Boat Leaves Pensacola Mysteriously, With German Sailors and is Believed to Have Supply of Copper on Board.

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov 10—The American steamer Zealandia was forcibly searched by a party from a British cruiser last week, while lying in the port of Progreso, Mexico The American consul there reports the cruiser now is lying outside, presumably waiting to seize the ship

On the face of such a report as the consul sent, even though incomplete, the conclusion here is that the British naval authorities not only violated Mexican neutrality, but far exceeded their rights in forcibly searching an American ship in a neutral port. The Zealandia figured much of late in reports of the British investigators who were on the trail of ships supposed to be fitting out in the United States for attacking oil carrying ships from Mexican fields, where the British navy draws a great proportion of its suppl yof fuel oil.

On October 7, the Zealandia mysteriously left Pensacola, Fla., at night, clearing for Tampico, Mexico, carrying a large stock of provisions and manned principally by a crew of Germans. An American flag painted on her hull had been painted over and it was reported that while at sea she flew the German colors, though that was flatly denied by her owners.

The ship moved from Tampico to Campeche, where British agents located ehr and reported she bore a large quantity of rosin for which there was no ostensible use in Mexico, though it is used largely in making shrapnel.

They also reported their suspicion that she boer a large quantity of copper and the British idea was that the ship was waiting for an opportunity to slip out with its cargo for some port where it would find its way to Great Britain's enemies

MYERS HANGING AT FORT WORTH TODAY IS GREWSOME AFFAIR

HEAD OF SLAYER IS SNAPPED FROM BODY WHEN TRAP IS SPRUNG. BEFORE EXECUTION PRISONER FORGIVES ENEMIES

ATTEMPTS TO SEVER ARTERY

Effort To End Life in Cell is Discovered Two Hours Before Time Set For Hanging—Declares He Thought Killing Justified

By Associated Press

Port Worth, Texas, November 10—C A Myers, 60 years old, today was hanged for the murder of A W Montague superintendent of terminals for the T. & P., on January 19

Myers' head was snapped off by the fall

Two hours before he was taken to the gallows, a guard found Myers digging at the arteries in his wrist with a piece of glass This was taken from him before he hurt himself

Before mounting the gallows, Myers said he still thought he was justified in killing Montague and that he forgave all his enemies

C A Meyers was formdiy charged with murder on January 20, 1915 after killing A. W Montague, superintendent of terminals for the Texas & Pacific railroad and Meyers' former employer He discharged Meyers several months previous to the killing. Refusal to reemploy Meyers as a switchman, caused him to accost Montague in the yards, speak a few words to him and before Montague could do or say anything, fire three shots into his body.

Meyers was indicted for murder the next day. Ten days later Meyers was tried, convicted and sentenced to hang. An appeal resulted in affirmation of sentence. His attorneys went to Governor Ferguson with a petition for clemency The governor held that the law should take its course, and that he would not interfere.

Thirty minutes before execution time, on August 12, the court of criminal appeals granted a stay of execution in order to test the man's sanity. The sanity trial was held in September, and a new death sentence imposed Among the witnesses was Meyers' wife She said she believed her husband was insane. The jury hearing the sanity proceedings returned a verdict that he was sane after taking two ballots Re affirmation of the death sentence was passed, and the date set for November 10

Meyers is sixty years old. Meyers previously had shot a fellow workman in Tulsa, Okla., and served a short sentence for the crime.

TEUTONS TIGHTEN HOLD UPON SERBIA; BULGARIANS LOSE

DEFENDERS' POSITION IN NORTH MUCH WORSE, BUT ALLIES HAVE WON VICTORY OF SOME IMPORTANCE IN SOUTH

INVADERS CONTROL RAILROADS

Only One Small Section of Line Through Remains in Serbian Hands and This is Expected to Be Attacked Shortly

By Associated Press.

London, Nov 10—The Serbian situation grows steadily worse in the north but offers fresh grounds for encouragement in the south All of the important railway line through Nish that remains in Serbian hands is a small section near Aleksinac, north of Nish, and this is threatened by the Bulgarian advance to the Morava river, and the southward drive of the German forces from Krusevac, both converging up on Aleksinac, where it seems likely that a junction soon will be effected

South of Nish the railway is undoubtedly in the hands of the Bulgarians as far as Veles, since Lesovac has been recently taken by them, but north of Veles near Krivolac the situation has taken a turn decidedly more favorable for the allies The Bulgarians are still attacking this point, but Saloniki dispatches report they have been driven back four times and the net result of the Bulgarians desperate attempt to work themselves behind the Serbian army has been heavy losses without the gain of a foot of territory

French and British troops figured conspicuously in this Belgian repulse, and it is confidently believed here that, reinforced by troops now arriving in large numbers, a decisive offensive by the allies will be possible soon

The loan by the allies to Greece, definitely announced today, will, it is thought, tend to cement friendly sentiment and by showing the confidence of the entente powers in Greece, do more than offers of territory or other inducements to quicken the country's benevolent inclinations into positive action

Reports differ as to the probability of the dissolution of the present Greek chamber, some stating that dissolution is imminent and a declare on the point of being promulgated Others say that former Premier Venizelos and his party are prepared to support the Skouloudis cabinet General opinion seems to be that all the elements are anxious to avoid a political contest under the present disturbed conditions

GOVERNOR FERGUSON BECOMES ISSUE IN BELL COUNTY FIGHT

CHARGES THAT PROHIBITIONISTS THERE ARE SEEKING TO DISCREDIT HIS ADMINISTRATION—WILL TAKE PART IN FIGHT.

CONTEST BEING HOTLY WAGED

Charges and Counter Charges, Denials and Recriminations Flying Thick and Fast—Sheppard and 'Cyclone" Davis Involved in Campaign.

Special to The Times

Temple, Tex, Nov 10—A local option campaign is being waged in Bell county that makes the recent argument in Wichita county look like 30 cents The governor of the state, an United States senator a congressman, preachers and speakers of more than state wide fame, and others have been brought into the campaign for speeches and statements The election takes place next Saturday and the campaign has already reach Another Lie Nailed and You're Another stage

Tomorrow Governor Ferguson "is coming home" as the anti advertisements state "to expose the political plot of the Anti Saloon League" The drys say that the governor has been "duped by his pretended friends at liquor headquarters and has been dragged into an absolutely false situation" They declare that Governor Ferguson was supported by hundreds of prohibitionists in Bell county and that 'by coming back home to fight them on a false issue which the liquorites themselves have manufactured Governor Ferguson is placing himself in the light of a political ingrate for which he can make no satisfactory explanation"

Pros Make Denial.

'We now offer Governor Ferguson or the liquor headquarters $500 reward to find one man in Bell county who has been asked by any member of the prohibition campaign committee 'to vote dry to discredit Governor Ferguson in his home county'" says the prohibition advertisement

"The liquor leaders" they declare "have done Governor Ferguson a mean political trick which his honor and manhood ought justly to resent and denounce'

The anti committee advertises that Governor Ferguson 'will take care of Dr A J Barton superintendent of the Anti Saloon League Reverend Ham and those others who have seen fit to make his administration an issue in this campaign The anti committee further invites the pro committee to come out over the signatures of the members of the committee and state that Governor Ferguson is not an issue that he has made a good governor and that they will support him for a second term

Will "Meet His Detractors."

Advertising his meetings of which there will be five, the anti committee says, 'He will meet his detractors face to face, he will defend his administration and show up the plot existing between the Anti Saloon League and his personal and political enemies to embarrass him and his administration through this campaign" The pro committee has offered $200 for a joint debate between Governor Ferguson and Cyclone Davis or for a debate by any anti speaker with Davis

The antis, in the last few days of the campaign seem to have taken the initiative—to use a military term—they have charged that the election was brought on by the Anti Saloon League of Ohio for the purpose of discrediting Governor Ferguson In support of this charge they quoted Dr A J Barton, superintendent of the league as having said in an interview The pros are making a hard fight to win Bell county, particularly because it is Governor Ferguson's home' Dr Barton has denied the statement declaring that he was incorrectly quoted The anti committee also charged that 'Reverend Ham works and cooperates with the Anti Saloon League Rev Ham in a signed statement declared that he had 'never gone anywhere in the United States, or in the world, under the auspices of the Anti Saloon League," and offered $1 000 to any person proving that he had

Sheppard's Name Used

The anti committee charged that telegrams and statements made by Senator Sheppard while at the border were part of an organized effort to discredit the Governor. Senator Sheppard has come out with the following statement "My statement and telegrams in connection with the Border situation were given without reference or knowledge of any interview that may have been issued by Dr Barton"

Cyclone Davis who has been campaigning in the county denies that he is in the employ of the Anti Saloon League. He said that the only time that he had ever been in the employ of the League was for three weeks last fall to make some speeches in Ohio and Massachusetts Replying to the statements made by C C. McDonald, Davis said "the honorable position he holds ought to inspire him to a higher plane of discussion than that of the saloon bully But I never fall out with these saloon defenders for really representing and tipifying the saloon It is known of all men, certified on a thousand court records that the liquor traffic lives on human depravity grows rich upon the wreck of ruined character and ruined homes; that it feasts on the decay and downfall of virtue

NEW EMPEROR OF JAPAN ASSUMES OFFICE TODAY FOLLOWING ANCIENT AND QUAINT CUSTOMS OF LAND

Announces Assumption of Office to Assembled Dignitaries Amid Rare Scene of Oriental Magnificence

By Associated Press

Kioto, Nov 10—Politics of an unusual type failed to prevent Japan's 'grand old man' Premier Count Shigenobu Okuma from playing a leading role this afternoon at the second great coronation ceremony when Emperor Yoshihito announced his accession to the people of the realm

Incensed at Okuma's retention in power, despite revelations of corruption during the cabinet crisis of last summer, members of the parliament are opposition launched a campaign based upon a curious superstitious sentiment They argued that in conducting the ceremony of the coronation of the Emperor the principle of purity should prevail throughout Any form of imperfection must be scrupulously avoided ans any physical disability or deformity was a form of imperfection Count Okuma was therefore risqualified for conducting the ceremony of coronation because of the fact that when a political fanatic threw a bomb at him 27 years ago he suffered the loss of one of his legs by amputation

A correlated objection inspired by ultra conservatives among the Shinto ritualists who feared the endangering of the sanctity of the imperial throne was based on the idea that the alleged political corruption which forced the retirement of Viscount Oura in the Okuma ministry was irreconcilable with the principle guiding the sacred ceremonies of coronation These objections were generally received with ridicule by the people the campaign of the opposition collapsed utterly and Count Okuma representing the now constitutionally governed people of Japan participated in this afternoon's ceremony as a figure second only in importance to the Emperor himself and the members of the imperial family

Emperor's Announcement.

In the morning Emperor Yoshihito had informed the spirit of his imperial grand ancestress of his formal accession and of his acquisition of the Three Sacred Treasures This afternoon's ceremony belonged in a special way to the people for it was dedicated to the purpose of announcing to them the accession of the Mikado The Emperor actually mounted the throne and read an address to his subjects who as during the morning rites, were represented by the members of the Diet governors of prefectures and the mayors of the cities of Kioto and Tokio The function was held in the renowned Shishiden Hall where the illustrious monarch Mutsuhito became Emperor and which, except for reconstruction in several directions retained its ancient simplicity and beauty Shishiden which signifies 'purple hall of mystery" faces south and is made of the sacred hinoki wood with its roof thatched from the bark of the same tree

The scene of the ceremony was laid partly within the main hall and partly in the open air courtway up on which the hall looked down Halls for the spectators extended on other side of the courtway As the Japanese doors and wall were removed the arrangement gave all participants an opportunity to see the setting of the courtway The stairs leading to the throne and the throne itself

Americans Present.

The two main gates leading to the Shishiden were opened in early morning the court police acting as guard At the appointed time in the afternoon the police guard was replaced by troops who lined up outside the gates and along the walls of the place The high dignitaries, peers members of the house of representatives, members of the diplomatic corps and their wives who had attended the coronation Shinto service before the imperial sanctuary in the morning arrived in front of the two side gates of the Shishiden and assembled in a hall preliminary to entering the ceremonial pavilion The American ladies, as well as the other ladies of the diplomatic corps for the most part wore the same court dresses with train as during the morning Mrs Guthrie, wife of the American ambassador, was an exception She wore a gown of white liberty satin with a specially designed court train embroidered in gardenias and star jasmine in gold running over a trellis of silver

Subsequently arrived thirty officials of the coronation committee They took their posts as the guards of the portals, representing thus the guardian warriors of the olden days They were gorgeous court robes of varied hues and ancient court hats Passing through the gates two coronation commissioners each followed by six juniors took their seats beside the gong and drum stands in the spacious courtway up on which the Shishiden with its open portals looked down This courtway was really the stage for the participating officials who were to play this historic drama of accession On either side of the stairs leading to the interior of the Shishiden stood the famed cherry tree and the noble orange tree These classical trees were the starting point of the courtway decorations which grew into a splendid picture as the various officials in their fascinating gowns of ancient Japan marched in, one by one, and took their allotod stations

Romantic Emblems Seen.

To the south of the cherry tree was a tall banner of scarlet brocade bearing the embroidered figure of the

CEREMONY OBSERVED THROUGHOUT EMPIRE—EMPRESS NOT ABLE TO PARTICIPATE IN RITES OF OCCASION.

NO CROWN OR OFFICIAL OATH

Mercly Announces to Spirits of Imperial Ancestors That He Has Ascended Throne—Ancient Rites Are Followed in Coronation.

By Associated Press

Tokio Nov 10—Yoshihito was confirmed or consecrated Emperor of Japan in Kioto the ancient capital, today and in every city, town and village throughout the Empire wherever indeed a Japanese was to be found, the event was celebrated in some fitting manner The Japanese call the consecration "Go Tairei," or the Great Ceremony, implying the greatest of all national ceremonies. When they are speaking English they refer to it as the Coronation.

The new sovereign neither subscribed to oaths nor took a hereditary crown upon his head. No clergyman, priest or archbishop officiated as the intermediary between Heaven and Earth

Here the Emperor himself is supreme Here the coronation takes the form of announcing to the spirits of the imperial ancestors that he has formally succeeded to the emperorship, that he has come into possession of the three Divine Treasures, and that he has actually ascended the "Takamikura" or imperial throne and from the throne he announces to his subjects that he has been consecrated as Emperor

Empress Not Present.

There is no break in the sovereignty over the Japanese Empire When the Emperor Mutsuhito passed away his son Yoshihito on July 30, 1913—immediately acceded to the throne and duly acquired the Sacred Treasures Simultaneously the new ruler, who was today consecrated received his ministers of state and members of the court and proclaimed his reign as that of "Taisho or "Era of Great Righteousness" Mourning for the Empress Dowager Haruko caused a postponement of the coronation ceremonies, and today they were conducted without the presence of the Empress Sadako, consort of the Emperor who is soon expecting to present another heir to the throne.

Commemoration of the coronation is found in many other directions. The government issued a special series of postage stamps and picture postcards and presented special coronation medals to all participating in the various ceremonies The medal is of silver. On the front is engraved a golden chrysanthemum with a branch of the citron and sacred cherry tree on either side On the back are inscribed twelve Chinese characters meaning Coronation Commemorative Medal," and the date, "Eleventh Month of Fourth Year of Taisho"

Officials and clerks in the service of the government contributed one and a half per cent of their salary to present suitable gifts to the Emperor and Empress The army gave a miniature field piece and the navy a miniature ship

Weddings Mark Occasion.

Congratulatory lanterns were hung at every house in the Empire Thousands of betrothed have hastened their marriage so that it may occur during the auspicous year of coronation and be sanctified by prosperity, health and joy

Prior to the commencement of todays' ceremony an imperial messenger was dispatched here from the imperial headquarters in Kioto to announce the celebration of the coronation ceremony before the Korei den, a shrine dedicated to the souls of the imperial predecessors, and the Shin-den, another shrine dedicated to the souls of the imperial ancestors in the prehistoric deity period The ceremony before the shrines, which are located in the imperial palace, was conducted in a solemn manner according to Shinto ritual by court officials Imperial messengers were also dispatched from Kioto on similar missions to the great shrine at Ise and to the principal Shinto shrines throughout the country, where similar ceremonies were performed this morning The imperial messengers to the prefectural shrines (there is a state shrine in each province) were represented by prefectural governors.

The day was signalized by informal meetings and reunions given by public or private corporations in honor of the occasion.

sun while south of the orange tree was a banner of white brocade worked with the figure of the moon. Next to the sun banner was a larger banner with the pattern of the "Good omened Clouds of Five Colors" and an embroidered figure of the Yaragarasu or the eight headed crow which traditionally is supposed to have guided the first Emperor Jimmu Tenno in a successful expedition against native tribesmen. Besides the moon banner stood the famed banner of the Golden Kite, appearing in embroidered relief on the back ground of Goodomened Clouds.

This emblem has a romantic history. The Emperor Jimmu, after suffering a defeat, had lost his way in the wilderness. A furious storm arose, the heavens became inky black and day was turned to darkness. Suddenly from the void came flying majestically a beautiful golden kite which alighted on the bow of the lost Emperor. Aided by the glittering light cast by the wings of the bird, a light so wonderful that it dazzled the eyes of the enemy, the Emperor Jimmu was able to turn defeat into brilliant victory.

All these banners stood upright, planted in square lacquered bases or frames. Additional panels in varied colors were set in rows down the courtway. Thus, were visible ten middle sized banners of the imperial chrysanthemum, the hues being blue, yellow, scarlet, white and purple, and still another ten smaller in size. On either side of the flight of steps conducting to the throne were planted imposing Banzai banners of scarlet. In the upper part was woven an earthen pot whose history is also strangely connected with the reign of Jimmu Tenno. Obstructed by the enemy, the Emperor divinely inspired, ordered eighty pots to be made from the earth and declared: "I shall sink these divine pots in the river. Now if the fishes become drunk and float upon the surface—then I shall surely succeed in pacifying this land." True enough the fish came to the surface and were carried down the stream like floating leaves. Jimmu conquered the land and ascended the throne as the founder of the dynasty. On the banners the golden ideographs for Banzai appeared under five figures of the fish.

In front of the row of banners stood ancient gongs and drums, each hung on a stand decorated with the figure of a flame which, according to Japanese mythology, is masculine and positive and implies magnificence and grandeur. Also, were seen ten halberds, each with a golden sword guard, a black lacquered shaft, and a bannerlet of scarlet brocade bearing a gold woven crest. The officials and honorary guards who wore the same ancient costumes as in the forenoon ceremony slowly took their places. Thus, the men by the gongs and drums were to beat them at the beginning and close of the ceremony. They were followed in by two score of coronation officials wearing full cut robes of many tints which offered a dramatic contrast of color to the gorgeous brocade banners before which they sat with folded feet. Then entered two groups, each of ten, who proceeded to the front of the courtway. Thus, beside the cherry and orange trees they were the guards of the grand ceremony.

Ceremonies Begin.

The stage setting now was almost complete—the banners and flags posted at regular intervals attended by their guards or warriors. With their robes of varied hues, their ancient armor, their bows and arrows their coronets and their cockades they made up an ancient oriental picture which could only enchant the occidental spectators.

All preparatory arrangements having been concluded the officials in charge beat the gongs and drums in the courtyard. The high officials, civil and military, peers, foreign ambassadors and ministers, other dignitaries and their wives who were assembled at the waiting hall were ushered to the high corridor about the hall, the doors of which were all thrown open.

When these officials and dignitaries had taken their seats there entered the grand master and vice grand master of ceremonies, accompanied by junior masters of ceremonies, all attired in ancient court robes with decorated swords at their side. They took their posts on the southern corridor. Next came the chief and vice chief of the coronation committtee and the prime minister and the minister of the household. Subsequently there appeared the Crown Prince, princes of the blood and other male members of the imperial family who stood on the platform in front of the imperial throne.

Crown Prince Attends.

The Crown Prince, who is only fifteen years of age, was a very fascinating figure. His robe was the same as worn by ancient courtiers. It was five folded kimono of figured silk of reddish brown color. The design was ducks nests. The kimono showed the edges of a pair of wide white skirt trousers woven with figures of hail stones. The kimono was encircled with a jewel band or belt inlaid with eleven pure white agates from Hokkaido, each agate carrying an engraving of a mandarin duck. The Crown Prince carried a small wooden sceptre.

As the spectators entered they were able to see the throne of the Emperor standing in relief from the central part of the Shishiden and facing the south—a dazzling object of purple, gold and crimson. The floor of the hall was covered with rich brocade of gorgeous hue and from the northern steps of the throne a series of fine mattings was observable leading to the inner halls of the palace, for the egress of the imperial retinue. On the wall between ceiling and lintel there hung a tablet of the sun framed in brocade and bearing the clouds of good omen. The dais for the seat of the Empress was provided on the platform to the east of the imperial throne.

The Emperor's Appearance.

A great stillness followed as the last beat of gong died away. Then the Emperor appeared from the recesses of the palace. He wore a regal vestment of dark orange colored silk. The Japanese describe it as "the yellowish red brown colored august robe." The hue is supposed to be that presented by the sun when in the morn it has just risen above the horizon. The dress gave an impression of massiveness and its general form might be described as cubist. This effect was heightened by the huge square cut long sleeves and the pair of lacquer shallow wooden shoes which just showed under the hem of the kimono.

The material of the robe, which was half Japanese, half Chinese in origin, was a silk fabric of rarest weave and texture. The design, cunningly interwoven, consisted of the bamboo tree surmounted by the leaves of the sacred paulownia tree which is the secondary crest of the imperial house, the chrysanthemum being the first. About the trees were figures of the kirin, a fabulous Chinese animal resembling a small giraffe and the phoenix, the mystical Chinese bird—both of which, according to Chinese tradition, are symbolical of the wise and enlightened ruler. On the Empesor's head reposed the imperial hat or coronet made of silk with a pennant of stiff silk gauze extending upright somewhat after the manner of a very high top knot.

Attire is Fantastic.

Beneath the skirt of the robe could be seen the bottom of wide skirt trousers which reached to the ankles and were made of white silk damask lined with scarlet silk. Another pair of trousers worn inside just showed their edges, likewise of scarlet silk. A loose tunic with a short front and the sides slit formed in the rear a long trailing train. In front it was folded over in a flap. Around the kimono was girdled a belt of black leather, inlaid with flat, precious stones, chiefly jade. The stones were visible only at the back.

The Emperor's robe was an interesting contrast to that adopted in earlier coronations when it was identical with that worn by the Emperors of China on similar occasions. The dragon, sun, moon, stars, mountain, pheasant and other figures conceived as good omens were embroidered on the Chinese robe. The last Emperor Mutsuhito abolished Chinese robes as he did Chinese customs, and at his own coronation ceermony donned a kimono of pure white. The Emperor's robe as seen today was a combination of Japanese and Chinese. The color and design were designated by the provision of the imperial accession law enacted during the reign of the late Emperor.

The Emperor was followed by two chamberlains who carried the sacred sword and divine jewel and by the lord chamberlain and other officials.

Ascends Beautiful Throne.

The Emperor, ascending the northern staircase leading to the imperial throne took his seat provided under the dome. The chamberlains placed the sacred sword and jewel on the tables to the right and left of the imperial throne within the curtains. Then they handed His Majesty a baton or sceptre made of ichii wood. This the Emperor held upright and rigid against the lower part of his chest giving an appearance of dignity, which is its object.

The throne which is called Takamikura in Japanese language expressed all that is beautiful in Japanese art. It possessed great importance because the Emperor's ascension there signifies his formal coronation as the ruler of the Japanese Empire. The throne was of wood covered with lacquer being mounted on another base dais 20 feet by 18 feet. The base dais had three steps each to the right, left and rear and exquisite crimson lacquered railings on all sides. The front side of the great base was decorated with three pictures representing the classical bird, the phoenix and two animals, the dragon and the tapir. These pictures were all painted in beautiful colors on a golden back ground. The surface of the base dais was covered with green brocade. The first and second step of the dais were spread with scarlet and the third with green bsocade. Hereupon was placed the imperial divan, which was crowned with an eight cornered dome and which was surrounded with a beautiful purple curtain whose design was the hollyhock.

Dome Beautifully Decorated.

The top of the dome was covered with black lacquer and was crowned with a blazing gold phoenix with outspread wings. The eaves all round the dome were decorated with silver mirrors, small and large, and at each corner stood a gold phoenix, smaller in shape than that at the pinacle. Each side of the octogonal gable or dome was decorated with the figures of the Good omened Clouds of the Five Colors.

From each corner hung decorations of gold and jewels. At each corner also hung small flags of red brocade and between the mirrors on the eaves were beautiful decorations of arabesques representing the vineyard and fringes called the Dragon's Tongue. On each side of the large mirrors appeared an eight-pointed flori form design and an arabesque on gold, inlaid with white jade.

Above the imperial seat inside the dome was a great circular mirror with its surface downwards. On the floor covered by the dome, namely the space enclosed by the deep purple curtains, there were two fine tatami or mattings bordered with scarlet silk. Upon the mattings were spread three fold brocade carpets and upon the carpets was placed the imperial seat for the Emperor.

Michodai or the August Seat of the Empress was provided several paces distant to the east of the Emperor's throne in the main part of the Shishiden. It was almost of the same shape and appearance as the imperial seat, though slightly different in the way of construction and decoration. A distinctive difference was that the lower end of each ridge of the octagonal dome turned upward like a new fern frond. The Emperor's throne was made according to the ancient customs observed in the imperial house while that of the Empress, though in close resemblance to the Emperor's was arranged to accord with the regulations of the new coronation law.

When the Emperor had taken his place, the lord keeper of the privy seal ascended the imperial dais and took his seat at the northeastern corner, outside the purple curtains, while the lord chamberlain, chamberlains, chief aide de camp and aides de camp took their posts on the platform in the rear of the imperial dais, all standing.

At a silent signal two chamberlains ascended the platform from the eastern and western staircases and reverently raised the curtain that hung before the throne. As the Emperor rose from his seat holding in his right hand the baton previously presented, all present bowed low. Then Count Okuma, the prime minister, wearing ancient Japanese kimono, left his seat in the southern corridor of the hall and descending to the courtyard stood there facing the thorne.

Announcement is Read.

The Emperor then read an edict announcing his accession to the throne as ruler of the Empire. It was an address to his subjects and at the same time a communication to the powers of the world that he had been consecrated as Mikado, or speaking more truly that he had consecrated himself as Mikado.

To his people Yoshihito announced that following the example of his imperial ancestors he hoped to promote the welfare and happiness of the nation and that he would strive for the advancement of the state and at the same time endeavor to strengthen the basis of national prosperity with the support and co-operation of his loyal subjects.

In former times this edict was read out by a court official in the courtyard.

When the Emperor had concluded, the prime minister ascended the hall from the southern staircase and standing directly in front of the throne made a response to the imperial address congratulating His Majesty on his coronation and wishing the everlasting prosperity and perpetuity of the imperial reign. The prime minister then returned where the Banzai flag was planted and raised his hand.

Banzai is Heard.

Instantly the thrilling national cry "Banzai" swelled from the throats of all. The cry was heard outside the palace and in accordance with previous arrangement was taken up by the multitudes in the street.

The Emperor followed by his retinue left the hall and amid reverent bows from the spectators departed from the palace while the gongs pealed and drums rolled.

The time of the acclamation was estimated beforehand to be three o'clock and in pursuance of an understanding Japanese throughout the nation and its dependencies—indeed wherever they might be found throughout the world—precisely at the hour of three raised the cry of "Banzai" in salutation of their sovereign and Mikado—Son of Heaven—Ruler Eternal.

The Empress' Robe.

The robe in which the Empress would have appeared had she been present was created by the coort couturieres and is described as follows.

The dress was a scarlet kimono of five thicknesses made of silk damask exquisitely embroidered. It was not actually of five thicknesses throughout, but only at the edges of the sleeves and skirt, the idea being to give the appearance of five separate robes worn one over the other. The kimono was long and trailing but disclosed in front the exceedingly wide hakama or Japanese divided skirt trousers—which were so wide as to resemble a very full skirt and which completely hid the feet. Over the shoulders was placed a short outer garment called the karaginu and resembling a manteau.

The imperial princesses wore the same ancient coronation robes this afternoon as during the morning ritual ceremony, their hair unbound and hanging straight. The robes of the court ladies who represented the Empress and who made obeisance at the proper times in her behalf were of the same general style as the Empress' robe though different in color and without certain features designed for royalty. The court ladies were grouped near the throne and with the princesses and the peeresses of the realm, who were also in ancient flowing kimono formed a gorgeous and fascinating feature of this historic tableau of old Japan.

TEXAN PRAISES PREMIER PREPARATION

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 8.—Mr. R. M. Harper, who lives at 420 West Jefferson street, Dallas, is one of the most earnest of the hundreds in this section who praise the premier preparation, Tanlac, for the good that it has done them.

Mr. Harper said: "Why shouldn't I be grateful to Tanlac and praise its merits to all my friends, when this new medicine has accomplished more good for me than everything else I have tried combined?

"I could hardly eat anything as I had lost nearly all my appetite. I was losing weight, was all run down and very pallid. I simply dragged along and my run down condition caused me to become nervous which is unusual. I saw Tanlac advertised and also took a friend's advice and decided to try it. My relief was so rapid that I was astonished.

"I have taken one bottle of the new medicine and now feel as well as I ever did in my life. I have gained five pounds in weight, have a healthy, hearty appetite, have no indigestion and my nervous condition is a thing of the past. As a general tonic for a run down condition, I think that Tanlac is the greatest medicine I ever tried. The bottle that I have taken was worth much more than the purchase price to me."

Tanlac, the master medicine will continue to be explained at the Palace Drug Store—Advt.

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months.

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

GOV. FERGUSON BECOMES ISSUE IN BELL COUNTY FIGHT

and honor; that it is a hot-bed of crime, a nursery of anarchy, breeds brutality, engenders strife, suborns witnesses, corrups courts and peoples hell with its victims, and when their speakers get down on the common level of the institution they are defending they are only fulfilling the old Generic law, that birds of a feather flock together and they are to be pitied rather than censured for being governed by the inherent law of their natures."

Governor's Friends Sorry.

It is into an atmosphere such as could be expected to result from such charges, counter charges, denials, and "Lies nailed" that Governor Ferguson is "coming home to defend his administration." Governor Ferguson has plenty of friends in Bell county who believe that the whole campaign of the pros is a conspiracy against him. Others of his friends believe he is being "duped" and are generally sorry to see him enter the campaign.

COURT HOUSE BOND ISSUE OPPONENTS MEET TONIGHT

The opponents of the court house bond issue will meet at the court house tonight at 8 o'clock to discuss a plan of campaign. A call for the meeting was issued by Mr. Van Horn who l[illegible] near Iowa P[illegible]k and was publish[illegible] Sunday's Times so that it has been well advertised over the county.

So far as is known there is little opposition to the bond issue in Wichita Falls and as most of those opposed to the new court house live in remote parts of the county a large attendance at tonight's meeting is not expected.

Love.

Love came back at eventide, smiling as of yore,
Love came back as he had come many times before
To my lips a welcome rushed, to my eyes a flame
And again my lonely heart sang because he came

Love came smiling through the dusk—light heart love and gay—
And I knew the words to send love up on his way
'He who wanders in at dark finds no torch alight,
Turn—the door is barred—so go back into the night

One sleeps here in peaceful dark who came in by day,
No new tenants enter here Stranger! On your way'
These the words I said to love, riving us apart
Peace I sought—now I know that I broke my heart

Forthwith Wag is transformed into a blooded steed, and Dud's commonplace "duds give way to a regulation Broncho Billy outfit Dud's steed races over hill and dale leaping lofty crags like a mountain goat. This breach of good faith is after all not heart breaking Jack Rawlins, whom Frederica has met again and whose ardent suit she has been resisting in order to play square with Lord Grosvenor now has a clear field Frederica tosses the English lord over with a right good will and returns to her old love—and Montana—too as 'Mrs Jack Rawlins

Wichita Falls, Texas, Nov. 10, 1915.

A prominent Texas Republican who heretofore has figured conspicuously in National Republican politics, gives it as his candid opinion that ex-President Roosevelt is about the only man the Republicans could nominate and elect over President Wilson. Of course the Republicans are not going to do any such thing, but just supposing they should, who would the German-Americans support? It strikes us they would just simply have to refrain from voting or put up a ticket of their own. Perhaps that would be the best thing for them to do. We would then have some better idea of just the number of voters there are claiming to be American citizens yet insist on putting Germany first.

In the event the President's plans for an increased army and navy for defensive purposes is acted upon favorably by the next Congress to convene in December it will mean that the general government will be forced to levy a heavier tax than now in order to meet the increase in expense. In some countries, and in fact in most countries that have large armies and navies to support an inheritance tax is levied to meet the expense. This places the increased burden where it properly belongs—on huge fortunes that ought not be allowed to grow larger. There are several fortunes in the United States that could be made to meet that extra expense should the government decide upon that method of raising the necessary revenue.

Cone Johnson of Tyler, solicitor for the Department of State, who has been visiting his home state, gives out the following concerning the attitude of the people of this state toward President Wilson and his administration: "So far as I could observe, there is little sentiment in Texas in favor of preparedness which smacks of this country entering upon a career of militarism or adopting the European system with reference to big armies and big navies. But I don't think that the program of the administration for increasing the army about 40,000 men and officers and the building of two dreadnoughts instead of one which is the usual program, and the adding of submarines and an aerial flotilla and smaller boats, will frighten the people of Texas or lead them to believe that President Wilson has changed his position materially on the question of war and peace. I don't look for the program of the administration, as it will be put through Congress to create a disruption of the party, as Republicans are hoping that it may."

SAYS THERE WILL BE NO INCREASE IN RATES FOR LIGHT AND POWER.

As is well known the people of this city are to vote upon a proposition for the Wichita Falls Electric Company to purchase the physical properties of the Citizens Light and Power Company and Mayor Britain has fixed November 20th as the day upon which said election is to be held.

There is opposition to the proposition principally for the reason there is a feeling which is general, that if the people vote for the old company to absorb the new company light and power rates will be increased. The franchise under which the old company is operating, and which does not expire for eight years yet, gives it the right to charge just about what it pleases, and under the circumstances the Times, believed that it was its duty to oppose the proposition unless the old company would voluntarily go on record and say that its rates for light and power as now being charged would not be advanced. As a result of its efforts along that line the following letter from the Wichita Falls Electric Company speaks for itself:

Editor Times:

In reference to your recent editorial in regard to the election called for Nov. 20, 1915, to decide if the voters of this city are willing for the Citizens Light & Power Company to sell its machinery and pole lines to the Wichita Falls Electric Company, beg to state most explicitly that no increase in the present rates of our company in the City of Wichita Falls was ever contemplated or will be made as a result of said election.

Yours very truly,
Wichita Falls Electric Company.
By F. N. Lawton,
Vice President.

So far as the Times can determine the rates now being charged by the old company are fair and reasonable, and in line with the rates charged by other electric and power companies in other cities. And now, that the old company has pledged itself not to advance its rates in case it is permitted to absorb the new company the Times sees no reason why it should oppose the proposition.

NOTES AND NOTES.

The note of this government to England, protesting in the matter of American shipping to neutral countries, is now on the way to England, and is said to contain 10,000 words. England, of course, will take her own time in making reply, and when the reply is made, it will probably be in such a way as to evade the questions involved and thereby call for further exchange of notes of protest.—Wichita Falls Times.

Still, the exchange of notes is somewhat less fatal than the exchange of bullets. The United States has been ridiculed time and again by rabid unneutral cartoonists and paragraphers for the notes she has sent to foreign powers, but we have yet to hear of a single note causing the death of anyone, directly or indirectly. If grave problems can be settled by ink, ink is a blessing to mankind. Then thousand words are better than 10,000 bullets.—Abilene Reporter.

WHAT SAY YOU, VOTERS?

Mr. Editor:—Article 11, Section 1, of the new city charter lately adopted provides that, "The City of Wichita Falls shall have the power by ordinance to buy or construct, own, maintain and operate a system of water works, gas or electric lighting plant, telephones, street cars and sewers, or any other public service or enterprise that may be approved by a majority of the qualified voters of the City of Wichita Falls voting therefor at any regular election for city officers in accordance with the provisions of this act; and may demand and receive compensation for such service furnished for private purposes and shall have power to condemn the property of any person, firm or corporation for the purpose of operating and maintaining any such utility, and for distributing such service throughout the city or any portion thereof, but in such condemnation proceedings no allowance thereof shall be made for the value of any franchise and only the actual physical assets shall be purchased by the City of Wichita Falls."

On the 20th of November the voters are asked to say whether or not the Wichita Falls Electric Co. may purchase The Citizens Power and Light Co., of Wichita Falls.

Doubtless a number of our citizens have, like the writer, given this question but little thought, being indisposed to interfere with other people's business. But since I have had the matter called to my attention and have looked over the situation in the light of our charter, my interest in the matter has been awakened to the importance of it, and if you will allow it, I will submit a few serious thoughts touching the subject, with the hope that I will be found with the majority of the good citizens of our city in prohibiting by our vote the taking over of the "Citizens" by the "Old light plant." I am reliably informed that some of the friends of the stockholders of the "Citizens" plant, though they oppose the said taking over, but will vote for it in order to befriend the stockholders of the "Citizens" plant, since they (the stockholders) are now losing money in operating it. It is evident, if this be true, that the "Old plant" could not operate it without loss either, if it continued to give the same rates for service that now is maintained by the "Citizens" company. The old company therefore would naturally discontinue its operation should they make the purchase to avoid such loss, and consequently several men would lose their jobs who are now employed by the "Citizens" company. Again, since both companies are out of reach of the city's power to regulate their rates for services, competition between them is the only lever we now have to get minimum rates for service. Our city charter gives power it is true, to regulate rates, etc., of corporations, but the charters of both companies antedate the new city charter and therefore not amenable to it. The manager of the "Old" company may voluntarily grant temporary concessions but they cannot bind the company beyond his holding of office, and he could be replaced on short notice.

So it appears to many of us that there is only one way to handle this problem satisfactorily to our citizenship, who otherwise could have no concern about it, and work no inconvenience on the two companies, and that way is to vote against the purchase of the new by the old light company, and afterward elect bonds to secure the money wherewith to purchase the Citizens Light and Power plant, and make it a municipal enterprise—a nucleus for a complete system extending its services over the entire city. On what other grounds could our incentive be excited to concern ourselves with the question?

The consciousness of owning a municipal light and power plant which we can absolutely control and use for our benefit ought, it seems to me, to excite our incentive to turn out in full force on the 20th of November and vote in a way that will make such a thing a possible reality—in short vote for the city's interest which is to prohibit the purchase of the "Citizens Light and Power Plant" by the Wichita Falls Electric Company. Because of the report that the "Citizens" plant is losing money should not deter us from voting as before suggested, for the city is as able to carry such loss as the other corporation, besides it is our custom to load up with non-revenue-bearing enterprises, such as city halls, fire engines, street paving, public parks, etc. all of which is good but we generally pass up revenue bearing industries, such as street cars, oil refineries, water works, etc., to private parties.

Again—if the voters elect the sale of the "Citizens" to the old plant the Citizens company will realize a good price for its franchise which would be unfair we think, because it would be selling for a price what the city freely gave to it without price, and thus keep the city out of this franchise for twenty years, the time of its charter, whereas if the city purchase the plant it gets back its franchise without cost, which would not materially hurt the company. There are too many good reasons for the city owning its own light plant, for me to enumerate here, since our thoughtful citizens are already acquainted with them and would be burdened by my naming them.

Summing up, we have three good reasons for voting against the purchase by the old plant.

First: Because the new plant is now a competitor.

Second: Because it is easily within reach of purchase by the city which will give back to the city its franchise and lay a foundation for a municipal light plant.

Third: It's ownership by the city will give it power to regulate the rates of the old plant, which otherwise could not be done. J. J. MANLEY.

URGES PREPAREDNESS FOR MEDICAL DEFENSE ALSO

By Associated Press.

Dallas, Nov. —Preparedness for national defense was considered today by the Southern Medical Association in annual meeting here. Dr. W. L. Rodman, president of the American Medical Association, suggested that the association join in a movement toi ncrease the medical corps of the army and navy in connection with the proposad increases in the military branches. Dr. Rodman said that the medical corps had shown lack of preparedness in the Spanish-American war. He asked southern physicians to help in developing an adequate and efficient medical corps to keep pace with any increase in the number of fighting men. His suggestion was referred to the council of the association, composed of one representative from each of fifteen southern states and from the District of Columbia.

PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL NOT PROSPEROUS THIS YEAR

Many Leagues Fail to Finish Playing Season—Secretary Farrell Makes Annual Report.

By Associated Press.

San Francisco, Nov. —Many interesting details in connection with the professional baseball season of 1915 which, for many reasons, was non-productive of financial benefit to those most closely identified with the national game, were included in the annual report of Secretary John H. Farrell which he presented at the annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues here today.

A resume of the business transacted by the National Association during the year showed that forty minor league organizations embracing 262 cities and towns in the United States and Canada qualified for membership in 1915 as compared with forty-four leagues representing 300 towns and cities in 1914. Ten of these leagues did not begin the season of 1915 and five of the thirty which started failed to complete their season's schedules. One of these was disqualified and the other four dropped out their failure to continue being attributed mainly to the unusually adverse weather conditions which prevailed. In one league 105 games were postponed on account of rain in a four months' playing season.

A total of 5472 players' contracts were received, recorded and promulgated by the association during the year. One thousand and three players were released by purchase out of two thousand and eight hundred and forty reported to the office of the Association for release. Ninety-one optional agreements were approved between National Association clubs and thirty-nine optional agreements were exercised by National Association clubs. Six hundred and seventy players were reported for suspension and 236 were reported for reinstatement. Seven drafted players were claimed under the waiver rule and 138 disputed cases were adjusted by the association during the year. Seventeen players were drafted by the National League and a similar number by the American League.

Out of $72,800 received by the association for drafted players the American League contributed $23,400 and the National League $21,950. In all $129,757 passed through the office of the National Association during the current year for drafted players, optional agreement players and others released by purchase.

NEXT SATURDAY IS FALL CLEANUP DAY

IS DESIGNATED BY CIVIC LEAGUE AS TIME FOR TAKING ACTION.

COOPERATION IS REQUESTED

Merchants and School Children Asked To Help In Movement to Rid Town of Trash.

Saturday, November 13th, has been designated by the Civic League as fall clean-up day and the ladies of the league ask the assistance of the citizens in getting the town cleaned up for the winter months. Especially is an appeal made to owners of vacant lots where weeds and trash have accumulated that the brush be cut and hauled away and everything put in a sanitary condition. The fallen leaves if allowed to remain on lawns and grounds make a very unsightly appearance and there are other conditions which need remedying, the league members feel, in order to make Wichita Falls a "City Beautiful" during the winter months.

The merchants will also be asked to co-operate in this cleanup and the school children will be enlisted, the date having been set on Saturday for this reason. The league will not be able this fall to have the trash hauled away free of charge but will provide wagons to do this work at a nominal price. These wagons will be located at some convenient spot to be announced later and those wishing their services will be able to find them.

EUROPEAN SACRIFICES ARE NECESSARY, DECLARES LANE

Secretary of Interior Says National Hopes and Ideals Hang In Balance During War.

By Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. —A new and greater Europe growing out of the war now raging, with the peoples of the warring nations coming at last to a realization of the real liberty Americans gained so long ago was pictured last night by the Secretary of the Interior, Franklin K. Lane, in an address before the State Literary and Historical Association of North Carolina.

"One half of the world is at war today," said the Secretary. "We look with horror upon the inhumanity of human nature and say to ourselves: 'Is this all that Christianity has brought? Have we made no further progress than to make possible this reversion to the days of Attila? What has become of that sweet song of the brotherhood of man? Was it but a spiritual opiate sung to deaden the soul of a brutal world? Whither has flown that sense of outrage against thinking despair. Surely our memories million because a prince was killed in Servia?'

"But these are the words of an unmany threatened with a transfer of have not failed us. We must look back, look through this blinding storm of fire and see the Europe that was, and that will be again. Then there was to be seen a pillar of fire leading the multitude—England trying to regain her lands for her people—Germany threatened with a transfer of political power from the few to the many—Russia slowly emerging from the middle ages with her groping Douma—France, la belle France, gentle, gracious, glorious France, living out of philosophy incorporated in the first ten lines of our own Declaration of Independance.

"Europe may burn up. Her people may be blasted by bankruptcy. Her national lines may be made to follow new channels. Her industries may be buried. Her song may fall and the blood and the brain of many an unknown Tolstoi, Beethoven, Pasteur or Darwin may fertilize her shell-furrowed fields. She may set up for a day new standards of national greatness. But these, all these, cannot destroy the passionate purpose of her people to own themselves, to find themselves and to decide for themselves what chains they will bear and what sacrifices they will make. For chains and sacrifices must be; these mean social life, and only the anarchist dreams of a life without restraints. But Europe knows that it may have what we Americans long ago gained, that degree of freedom in which sacrifice is made—consciously and proudly made—for those and to those with whom we have a common interest. And this is liberty."

WICHITA GENERAL HOSPITAL NAME OF JOINT INSTITUTION

Councilmen and Commissioners Select Title, Over Some Opposition Tuesday.

"The Wichita General Hospital" was the official name adopted for the joint city and county hospital by the county commissioners and the city council in joint session Tuesday afternoon. There was some opposition to this name as several members of the commissioners court and one councilman wanted the name "County and City Hospital" adopted. The vote first resulted in a tie, Mayor Britain who presided casting the deciding vote in favor of the name "Wichita General Hospital."

The hospital was opened this morning, but is not yet ready for patients.

Commissioner J. P. Jackson and Councilman John W. Bradley were appointed a committee to report on the acceptance of the building from the contractors.

HIGH SCHOOL CLASSES IN DOMESTIC SCIENCE LIMITED

Accommodations are Sufficient Only For Freshman and Sophomore Girls.

For the first time in the four years which it has been a part of the high school curriculum the domestic science department has no upperclassmen enrolled, the classes being confined to members of the freshmen and sophomore years. This is not due to any lack of interest on the part of the juniors and seniors but a lack of time and space. The instructor, Miss Etta Alded has four classes each day giving them double periods and all of her classes except one are full. Two of the classes have twenty-five enrolled with only accommodation for twenty-four. In both the cooking and sewing classes the students have taken a great deal of interest in this term's work and have a number of exhibition pieces in tatting, embroidery and other fancy work. The cooking classes are learning the art of making pastry, bread and cake.

TENNIS COURTS MUCH USED BY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

Hope to Bring District Championship Honors Here—Match Games Are Planned.

The high school tennis association has grown from an even dozen members at its organization a little over a month ago to a membership of forty-two and with the growth in membership has come an increased enthusiasm for the sport. The past weeks of fair weather have been ideal for tennis players and every afternoon and morning the three courts are full of boys and girls who are in training for the championship.

There are four or five of the players who are getting in fine form, according to Mr. Miller, faculty supervisor of tennis, and the association is expected to furnish several contestants for the district championship. In a short time match games will be asked for with town players, particular attention to be paid to doubles at the present time.

The use of the courts has been extended to non-student players on the payment of a small fee for the upkeep of the grounds and there are a number who have taken advantage of this opportunity.

FRENCH AVIATOR'S DIARY TELLS INTERESTING STORY

Journal Kept By Pegoud Gives Detailed Account of His Experiences in Midair.

By Associated Press

Paris, Nov —Friends of Pegoud, the French aviator, are planning to make a permanent record of his services to aviation by publishing his diary which contains a minute and characteristic chronicle of his daily work His activity, as shown by his diary, was extraordinary During the month of August, for example, there were eleven days of rain and two days when he was prevented from flying by accidents to his machine On the other eighteen he chased twenty-one German machines, fought two "pitched battles" in the air and made more than a score of reconnaisances

A characteristic bit from the diary is published in the Paris Journal, describing Pegoud's journey of December 27th when he lost his way and nearly ran out of petrol in the enemy's country The airman writes

"Weather cloudy Morning observation at Verdun No Boche aeroplane about At 3 20 leave with eight shells for Nantillois At 4,200 feet over Bras I get into clouds Fog and rain continue over Nantillois More than beastly My machine in all positions Can see nothing Am continually wiping my glasses, compass jammed

"After 1½ hours of all sorts of worry dive to get my position I notice 1 800 feet under the clouds a fine captive balloon and drop my eight bombs General panic in the company Several guns are fired at me, I rise up into the fog Lost again Dive down to see and continue flight at 3,000 feet Up again among the clouds and dive down to 2,400 feet

"I steady machine and compass and take the direction S W I have an hour's petrol left. Swearing like a pickpocket. It's the limit I don't know where I am and am fired at. I am 2 400 feet up Up into the clouds Down again. Note a rather large station. Am shot at. Up into the clouds Dive twenty six minutes later and am again over the station I'm like a roaring wild beast. Only 15 liters of petrol left Don't know where I am, am shot at I make up my mind, and am going to fly under the clouds at 2 400 feet S W. till petrol gives out despite shots

"I note a village far off and as I get nearer recognize Etain I can use my lungs to breathe now. Saved! Good Heavens, to think how mad I have been with rage I dive with the motor at full speed. The wind is in my nose I keep wiping the glasses and break one case and all Pass over Etain at 1,450 feet, still diving with motor at full speed

"Reach Verdun in fog at 150 feet and get hail and rain Can see nothing One of my eyes is hurting badly Land It's a splendid feeling after all I can breathe now with my face to the wind and take in lungfulls of air But I think how I have cursed. Another lesson for me and I shall keep my eyes open more than ever Report made at once Captain astonished and boasts about it to other officers and makes his report Food At my ease, very pleased to be by the fire side at Verdun Smoke several pipes which are excellent Bed"

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov 10—Predictions of snow and cold and rain had a bullish effect today on wheat Traders who professed to believe that the maximum of the spring crop movement had been reached were conspicuous buyers. Advancing prices at Liverpool tended to handicap the bears After opening 1 8 and 1-4 to 7 8 and one cent higher with December at 1 02 5-8 to 1 03 and May at 1 03½ to 1 04 1 4, the market scored a material further upturn

Corn felt the influence of unsettled weather The opening which ranged from 1 4 and 3 8 to 5 8 and 3 4 advance was followed by moderate additional gains Firmness developed in oats as a result of the strength of other cereals Lower prices on hogs weakened provisions

Grandpa Roosevelt Forgets Politics In Sturdy Grandson's Presence

COLONEL and MRS. ROOSEVELT and RICHARD DERBY, JR.
COPYRIGHT 1915 CAMPBELL STUDIO, NEW YORK

Forgetting the cares of politics and other distractions from the really important things of life—such as grandchildren—Colonel Roosevelt posed in the charming family group shown here. The handsome little fellow is Richard Derby, Jr., son of Dr. Richard Derby of New York and the former Miss Ethel Roosevelt. Dr. Derby and his wife went last year to France to care for war victims in the hospitals, leaving Richard, Jr., in care of Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt, but they have returned.

PROSPERITY AGAIN GENERAL IN ENGLAND

TIMES ARE IN MARKED CONTRAST WITH THOSE OF YEAR AGO

UNEMPLOYMENT IS UNKNOWN

Warning Note Is Sounded By Those Who Fear That Apathy May Result

By Associated Press.

London, Nov. —How completely the war has baffled the foresight of economic experts is shown by the remarkable wave of surface prosperity which the masses of Great Britain are experiencing. Only a little more than a year ago political economists were discussing seriously the need for organizing public works on a great scale for the tens of thousands who would be thrown out of employment. Now financiers like Sir George Paish editor of the Economist, and Edwin Montagu the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, are sounding strong warnings against the extravagant living of the nation as a whole. "Money is being squandered on all sides," declared Sir George Paish in a recent speech, and the newspapers are taking up the same cry.

The conditions which the war has developed, have settled the problem of public works on lines which apparently were not foreseen. The enormous increase of the British army to three million men, and the demand for workers in the public and private munitions works, has absorbed all the available manhood of the country procurable on a basis of voluntary service, and given a great surplus of employment to the United States. Money is being discharged freely and even lavishly and extravagantly to contractors and to workingmen, and for the support of the families of soldiers, according to the economists, and it is being spent by the people at large with equal lavishness and extravagance.

These conditions cause excited debate by all classes. In the enormous redistribution of wealth the general drift would appear to be from the hands of the rich and the middle classes into the pockets of the workingmen and the families of soldiers. While the workers furnish a majority of the men under arms, the people with large estates and those with savings and middle class incomes believe that they furnish, through taxation and war loans, the bulk of the money which is carrying on the war, and which finds its way down through the government and contractors to the small merchants and workmen. This results in the enforcement of unusual economy upon the wealthy and the middle classes, (except those concerned in war work, who are many), and encourages unusually free spending in the stratum usually most economical. While the Covent Garden Opera has been suspended during the war time the theaters of the masses, and the picture shows are prospering. The hotels and restaurants supported by the wealthy pass their dividends; the popular resorts are doing good business. Tailors and fashionable dressmakers claim to be suffering great depression but the wives and daughters of workingmen are dressed better than ever before in their lives. Wine merchants are putting up their shutters, but the public houses where beer and gin are consumed are crowded.

Mr. Montagu complained of great spending on luxuries, and cited the fact that the sale of pianos has increased. He called upon every citizen to be prepared to put at least one half his current income at the disposal of the state. The wealthy classes of England would not agree that the luxury and extravagance charged is practiced by them. No observer could fail to credit them with accepting the enormous war taxes imposed upon incomes with a remarkable patriotism and resignation.

Speaking for the other side of the case, Sir Alfred Mond, a wealthy manufacturer, told the House of Commons that men from agricultural districts who formerly earned four dollars a week are getting fifteen and twenty dollars from the government, and men are being paid five dollars a day for putting up huts for the soldiers. Auman Bryce, brother of the former Ambassador to America, testified that boys who formerly worked for two dollars a week are being paid by the government more than ten dollars for carrying the bags of government carpenters.

A writer in the Daily Mail says: "I met a man who, without any previous experience as a craftsman, was earning from six to eight pounds a week ($30 to $40) making shell cases in a certain government munitions factory. I am told that workmen in Birmingham now drive up to their daily task in taxi-cabs, and that in that fortunate city the shops are doing a trade in expensive luxuries such as has never been known before."

Extravagant payments to contractors, and to buyers and experts who have been taken into government employ, is a complaint against the government levied by many business men. Corruption is not charged, but high wasteful disbursements due to ignorance of business affairs on the part of officials and the necessity for making hurried contracts. The country would not suffer so much from these conditions if it was self contained like Germany and money hardly flowed in a circle from the government into the hands of the people and back to the government in taxes and loans. But Britain is importing enormous quantities of goods for the use of the people, besides war supplies, and the exports do not balance the imports by many millions.

Advocates of economy in the popular press take advantage of the opportunity to call upon the government for retrenchment. The office of Lord Chancellor alone, with almost nominal duties, is costing $125,000 a year. Lord Buckmaster, recently the head of the Press Bureau, is drawing the salary of $50,000, while his predecessor Lord Haldane, and two other former incumbents of the office are receiving pensions of $25,000 each. The two law officers of the Crown, the Attorney General and the Solicitor General, are compensated chiefly by fees which amount to about $100,000 for each official. Several cabinet ministers draw salaries of $25,000. The payment of $2,000 salaries to members of the House of Commons is a comparatively new law. The writers for newspapers which circulate among the working classes call upon the government officials to set the example in responding to Mr. Montagu's appeal to citizens to place half their incomes at the disposal of the government.

REDUCTION IN AMOUNT OF DRUNKENNESS IN LONDON

By Associated Press.

London, Nov. 9.—The effect of the new anti-treating order has been immediately felt in the police courts in the laboring districts. Where the North London magistrate dealt with sixteen cases of drunkenness the same day a week ago, on the day following the new order he had but three. Similar reductions were noted in the East End districts. The public house owners complain that when men pay for their own drinks in a crowd, they seldom take more than one. But there has been no organized protest, as the owners know that if the anti-treating order proves a failure, the hours of opening will be materially reduced.

STATE UNIVERSITY FACULTY MEMBER GIVES LECTURE HERE

Large Crowd Hears Talk on "Poets of Faith" Musical Program is Feature

A large crowd, composed for the most part of club women of the city, heard the lecture by Dr. Edward T. Wharey of the University of Texas last evening at the First Presbyterian Church. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Unity Club and the members of the various clubs in attendance were there by special invitation of this club. A highly enjoyable musical program with Mrs. O. E. Maer, Mrs. Bruce Greenwood, Mrs. Walter Robertson, Mrs. C. T. Tully and Ivan Murchison as artists was given before the lecture, which was on Tennyson and Browning "The Poets of Faith."

Mrs. Carrigan introduced the speaker of the evening and as president of the Unity Club, the oldest literary club in the city told of the work of the club. The subject of Dr. Wharey's lecture, the qualities revealed by the poems of Tennyson and Browning is one of interest to the members of the Unity Club, in particular as they have been studying Browning for the past two years with Tennyson in conjunction. The lecture was an enlightening one from many standpoints and served to create a fresh interest in the two English poets under consideration.

THERE ARE

Some citizens in Wichita Falls, who's dear old father and mother rest in unmarked, unremembered graves.

Old Mother Earth is far kinder towards them than they. She endeavors each year to spread the soft green mantle of love above them, and in so far as possible hide human negligence from the eyes of friends who pass that way.

Peace be to their ashes, God has not forgotten even as the Sparrow falleth not unnoticed by him.

BLOODED LIVESTOCK WILL TRAVEL WITH ATTENDANT

More Guernsey Cattle Brought Here By Mr. Kemp—Will Encourage Breeding

J. A. Kemp has returned from a trip to Wisconsin, where he purchased fifteen thoroughbred Guernsey heifers from George McKerrow and Sons at Pewaukee. These heifers will arrive in Texas next week to be added to Mr. Kemp's herd of these cattle here. They will be shipped on special schedule of fast freights so as to get through as quickly as possible. They will be accompanied by an attendant who will remain to look after the herd for a time at least.

Mr. Kemp intends to build up one of the finest herds of Guernsey cattle in the country with the object of the introduction of these cattle into this section. To encourage the breeding of these cattle Mr. Kemp is offering free service of his imported bull, Governor, to owners of cows in this section. This bull is acknowledged as one of the finest Guernsey specimens in America.

NAME OF WICHITA FALLS APPEARS ON JAR SHIPMENTS

This City Given Publicity By Ball Brothers on Cartons Containing Jars

The name, Wichita Falls, is now being identified in the public mind with Ball Brothers fruit jar plant, the name of the town appearing on all cartons in which fruit jars are shipped from the Wichita Falls plant. Heretofore the cartons bore the name of Muncie, Ind., Ball Brothers headquarters only. The matter was taken up with Ball Brothers by the Chamber of Commerce with the result that the new cartons have the name of Wichita Falls, Texas and Muncie, Ind., printed on them.

J. M. BLAND SPEAKER TODAY AT ROTARY CLUB LUNCHEON

Attendance at today's luncheon of the Rotary Club was the largest so far recorded, these being a total of 64 members and guests gathered around the board at the Metropolitan. The speaker was J. M. Bland, who told a few things about the real estate business. Captain H. G. Robb of the Salvation army also spoke briefly, telling what the army is trying to do toward a permanent home in this city.

O. T. Bacon, second vice-president, occupied the chair in the absence of President Keith, who was unavoidably detained. In his talk, J. M. Bland said that while the real estate business had suffered somewhat by reason of the bad repute of "curb-stoners" and others who made real estate their calling, he still considered it a business that meant much to a community. He called attention to the fact that real estate men are at the front whenever a movement to help the city is under way, and that no one surpasses them in faith or in works.

J. W. Bradley, who represents the furniture business in the club will be the speaker at the next meeting. On Thursday night of next week some moving pictures of especial interest to Rotarians are to be exhibited, at a place to be designated later. Several new members were added to the roll today.

Those present today were Messrs. Bacon, Bland, Arnold, Priddy, Auld, Hanks, Stampfli, Staniforth, Harvey, Shepperd, Roberts, Jones, Lawton, Stokes, Downing, Phillips, Friedly, McFall, Anderson, Stripling, Deatherage, Britain, Clifford, McCoy, Brown, Bray, Carithers, Newton, May, Wheatley, Moore, Hurley, Marcus, Thomas, Hendricks, McGregor, Noble, Carter, Bradley, Smock, White, Bundy, Gould, Robb, Hardeman, Henderson, Bacon, Wren, Taylor, Bean, Havis, Shelton, Scharff, Thornberry, Berry, Martin, Robertson, Smith, Hirschfelder, Davis and Maxwell.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN BY AUSTRALIAN WHEAT CROP

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 9.—The Australian wheat crop will be far beyond any yield which the Commonwealth has ever known. Appeals to farmers last spring to demonstrate their patriotism by increased acreage resulted in unusually extensive wheat sowing and it is now estimated that the Commonwealth's wheat yield this season will approximate or exceed 150,000,000 bushels.

The Greatest Coat Cutter

in America can do nothing more than follow the measurements he has at hand. The finest tailors in the world make clothes that would not fit anything but a hipopotamus. But don't blame the tailors or the engineers who design clothes because the fit depends on the man who LAYS THE TAPE. The artist of the craft tailoring must depend for his specifications on the man who measures the form that is to wear the suit. For years I have laid the tape on every shape and size of man from the "Beef Trust" to the "Bean Pole" and made the suits fit. Any time the suit don't fit it is my suit and you can't leave my shop with it. It won't cost you a penny to find out whether or not I can make these statements stick.

Of the 750 applications expected today, about one-third will be given state aid it was stated.
